The first bar in the hotel was on the Mezzanine level, just above the Dining Room. Known as El Dorado Diggings, it would serve many customers between 1933 and 1943. During World War II the United States Navy converted the entire hotel into a convalescent hospital, converting the El Dorado Diggings into a Catholic chapel but allowed the Sweet Shop to sell alcohol. As the first store in the US military hospital to do so, the sailors loved it, purchasing over 1000 pints of beer a day!

After the war, the El Dorado Diggins returned to public use. A new bar was added about 1951 when the Ahwahnee Bar created on the site of the original entrance way. Both would proudly serve guests until 1990, when El Dorado Diggins was removed and converted into suites.

Today The Ahwahnee Bar continues strong, selling fine spirits in an elegant setting. Many also choose to enjoy a drink while dining in the most popular room in the hotel - the Dining Room. The Ahwahnee Dining Room is an enormous room measuring 130 feet long, 51 feet wide, and about 34 feet high. Immense logs of stripped and polished sugar pine, and wrought iron candelabras suspended from the rafters create a unique sophistication.
